

FASHION and charity will link hands on Saturday, August 31 at Cavendish Square in Claremont when Capetonians from the worlds of art, dance, opera and even journalism take to the ramp to model fashions from the mall's boutiques and designers — all in aid of funds for St Luke's Hospice.

Dancers, singers, people of the art world — and even journalists — will be models.

Dancers Carol Kinsey, Linda Lee, Phyllis Spira and Philip Boyd will join SA National Gallery curator Marilyn Martin, opera singer Marieta Napier, gourmet Ramola Parbhoo, radio personality Damon Durant and two members of the Top of the Times team — wine columnist Jabulani Ntshangase and Top of the Times editor Tony Jackman — in the show, called Prêt-à-Porter and hosted by TV personality Doreen Morris. She will be accompanied by the new Miss South Africa, who will be chosen tomorrow night.

Rael Levitt of Seeff Properties will auction items donated by the participating guests — some fun, some valuable, and some simply interesting.

Tickets, at R100 a head, are available from Carien Hugo at St Luke's Hospice, call (021) 797-5335.

St Luke's Hospice can add life to the final days

All proceeds from ticket sales and

MASTERPIECES: Marilyn Martin (left) preens in a black crêpe evening gown and mousseline overshirt with ostrich feather detail from la Boutique Yvelle. Louis Janse van Vuuren wears his elegant outfit from Just Men with a certain artistic flair.

In the picture on the right they are seen in day wear from Fabiani and la Boutique Yvelle.

Heading for the ramp

VERY FRENCH: Marilyn Martin (left) in a Côte d'Azur long dress and jacket ensemble from La Boutique Yvelle.

